Last week, our class went on a trip to Yangmingshan National Park. When we reached the park, we went to see Milk Lake. We were surprised to see that the water was white. It looked just like milk.

Next, we hiked to Cold Water Pit. We walked past many tall trees and crossed a long bridge. When we got there, we saw several small ponds. Some of my classmates went into a pond and got their feet wet. After that, we went to Small Oil Pit. Smoke could be seen rising from the ground. The hot ground made loud sounds, and we thought it was interesting. After lunch, we went to Dream Lake. The lake looked very special because of the thick mist.

Finally, our teacher led us to an area with lots of grass. Many cows were walking around. We took many photos. Then we sat down and played card games together. We had a great time. When we left the park, we all felt really happy.

Dear Carla,

I'm sorry to hear that you're sick. I hope you're feeling better now! I want to thank you for showing me around Taipei last week. I can get around the city on my own now. I'm really enjoying it here! However, some of the dish names at restaurants here are so strange, like spring rolls, onion exploded beef, and century eggs. Do people really eat those? The last one sounds the strangest of all. Maybe they're just bad translations. Anyway, I'm having a great time, and I'm sad that I have to go back to Poland this Friday. I hope I can visit Taiwan again soon.

Best wishes,
Jason

Dear Jason,

I'm glad that you're able to get around Taipei without any problems. I wanted to take you to more places here, but I was so sick that I wasn't able to. I'm feeling better now.

As for your questions, you're right about the names—they're just bad translations. They're actually quite delicious. You have to try them before you leave! I hope the next time you're in Taiwan, I can take you to other great cities.

Best,
Carla
